TAX LAW AND ESTATE PLANNING

Planning for the future and anticipating the questions of tomorrow can alleviate the burden of taxes that can challenge — or even cripple — the financial health of commercial or personal clients in the event of a loss. New legislation about tax issues and financial matters can pose great challenges to both individuals and businesses. The tax law and estate planning practice of Beattie Padovano, LLC helps our clients successfully navigate these challenging and sensitive matters.

In estate planning, the goal is to reduce the burden for those our clients care about the most. Clients often wait too long before they address this aspect of financial and legal planning. Effective estate planning identifies the needs of each beneficiary, be it a minor child or a favored institution. Questions of custody, executors, and the benefits of trusts are just some of the sensitive issues that are best addressed before there is an emergency or need.

Our tax law and estate planning attorneys can draw upon the firm's experience with real estate matters and the various structures of businesses ownership to ensure our clients' interests are protected. In addition to serving clients directly, the members of this practice area work closely with other attorneys in the firm to provide counsel and ensure that tax protection is teamed with asset protection.
